'The Difference Between News
and Opinion'

Editor:

I began doing radio community commentaries in June of 2006 and finished No. 93 on March 1, 2010. At the time, I was concerned about where people got their information (Mailbox, May 29). My concern has only increased. Education and the validity of information are crucial in a democracy. People are relying more on social media, talk shows, blogs and political spin, none of which are required to be truthful. Journalists are trained to ferret out the facts and give both sides without opinion.

Some people don't understand the difference between news and opinion. Journalists try to keep bias out of their news reports, although they might not always succeed. Journalism used to be considered the fourth estate, or branch, of government and necessary to democracy. Opinion, on the other hand, can be based on feelings, biases, economic or political persuasion. It's nice if you have some facts, but not required. It is, in fact, just your opinion.

Just where do we get our information, and how valid are our sources? Beware of those who use marketing techniques to sway public opinion. Tell the "Big Lie" often enough, and people will believe it, real or not. Use generalities; no specifics. Use hot-button words and slogans and repeat them over and over. Use clever phrases that incite fear, blind loyalty or reinforce our biases. Eliciting a chuckle allows us to feel superior to those who don't share our bias. Half-truths pick out only the parts of an argument that support our position and conveniently leave out the rest. Statistics, charts and slick PR pieces rely on these techniques.

Our democracy hangs in the balance right now. Make sure you are basing your political decisions and support on actual facts and not opinions spouted by messengers using the tools of propaganda.

Kay Escarda, Eureka

'All-encompassing Propaganda'

Editor:

Dennis Scales says Trump's policies will put us on a "solid fiscal path" (Mailbox, May 8). Yeah, sure; but seriously, why would anyone support Trump? He's not smart, attractive, compassionate, likable or inspiring; he's maybe amusing, in a dumb, crude way, but not someone you'd loan your car to, let alone vote for.

It began as tiny as a dust mote
Dancing in the mist
Of the swirling waterfall
Hundreds of feet deep in the narrow canyon
Then circling, circling
Upward and outward
As if on golden tendrils
Increasing in size
As it rose
Finally soaring
White head and tail radiant in the sun
Huge wings outstretched to catch the thermal
It burst into open space
Exploding our senses
Filling our souls
And leaving us breathless
Until it became again a speck
Swallowed by the infinite blue
Of a perfect summer's sky
On a perfect summer's day.

— Jean Munsee

Yes, the same kind of racists and dopes liked Nixon, Wallace, Reagan, Bush, etc., but they like Trump more. And remember, Nixon and Wallace were smart, Reagan and Bush had capable handlers, none of them ranted on about pop stars, trophy wives or characters from old movies, and they all understood that the president is supposed to at least pretend to be statesmanlike. Trump doesn't know or care about anything except money, golf, TV, flattery and revenge. So why is he more popular? Must be smartphones or TikTok, or something.

But then again, all Americans have been subjected to a regime of all-encompassing propaganda designed to turn us into loyal servants of a settler-colonial oligarchy that was founded on crimes dwarfing those of Hitler or Stalin, and which maintains neo-colonial rule over most of the world. Given that, we can't really blame the Trumpers for lacking the intellectual and/or moral fortitude to resist that propaganda the way we progressives have; it's not their fault for being so dumb and cowardly. Moreover, since it's always the bien pensant liberals who really impede the unfolding of history by dulling the point of the revolutionary spear, isn't it those who fall for Trump's absurd lies who are more likely to be the (unknowing) agents of positive change? After all, what has revealed the moral contradictions of capitalism more perfectly than Trump's tweet about Springsteen's "atrophied" skin?

Rancor, Recalls and a Resignation

Blue Lake city government falls deeper into turmoil

By Thadeus Greenson
thad@northcoastjournal.com

Things have gotten awfully muddy in Blue Lake.

The city council's decision to part ways with longtime City Manager Amanda Mager early last month has laid bare deep divisions in the small city of about 1,200 residents, prompting an extended series of social media spats between those applauding the newly elected council majority's move and those decrying it and a lack of transparency in the process.

Things came further to a head last week, when a group of residents used the public comment period of the Blue Lake City Council's May 27 meeting to serve its three newly elected members — Councilmember Kat Napier, Mayor Pro-tem Elise Scafani and Mayor John Sawatzky — with official notices of an effort underway to recall them from office. News then broke two days later (via the Lost Coast Outpost's Ryan Burns) that another councilmember, Christopher Firor, one of only two holdovers from the previous council, had resigned his post two minutes before that meeting began. Here's a brief rundown of what we know about Mager's separation from the city, the recall effort under way and Firor's resignation.

No Paper Trail

It remains unclear who on the Blue Lake City Council decided the city should part ways with former City Manager Amanda "Mandy" Mager after 10 years of service, and when the decision was made, much less why.

The council met in closed session May 6 to discuss Mager's employee performance, as it had done five times previously since the start of the year, but reported having taken no action at the meeting. Two days later, amid rumors Mager had been fired, the city released a statement saying she "and the city council have mutually decided to end their relationship May 9." The council then voted unanimously 4-0, with Firor absent, on May 13 to ratify a separation agreement with Mager, the provision of which included the wording of the May 8 announcement, indicating the separation agreement had been reached in principle prior. Experts told the Journal this is an apparent violation of California transparency laws, which require that final employment decisions by a council — like deciding to enter into a separation agreement — be made in an official meeting and be reported out of closed session. (They say the council again violated the law May 13 when the city failed to put separating Mager from her employment with the city or ratification of the agreement on the council's closed session agenda.)

City Attorney Ryan Plotz has repeatedly declined to answer questions about when the council's decision to part ways with Mager was made and who made up the majority of members that reached it. Sawatzky has directed such inquiries back to Plotz, while other council members have not responded to Journal emails seeking comment.

In the aftermath of the city's May 8 announcement, the Journal filed requests with the city under the California Public Records Act seeking a copy of Mager's contract, as well as any formal complaints filed against her during her tenure, and documents related to their investigation. Additionally, the Journal requested any written notice of intended removal given to Mager, which would have been required under the Blue Lake Municipal Code if the council had begun the formal process of firing her, as well as any written reasons for the action, which the code provides Mager could have requested.

Plotz responded that the city has no records of formal complaints filed against Mager during her almost decade-long tenure, and no documentation of her being given a notice of intended removal.

So there's nothing in the official record to lend clarity to who on the council decided to part ways with Mager, exactly when or why. What we do know is that on March 13, at the council's direction, the city renewed Mager's contract and gave her a $10,000 annual raise. Then, less than two months later, the city agreed to pay her four months' salary — $30,000 — and health and benefits in exchange for terminating her employment and her promise not to sue the city.

Recall Process Underway

As rumors that Mager had been fired on May 6 swirled — and before the ensuing statement about a mutually decided separation had been released — a group of Blue Lakers gathered in Perigot Park and began talking about launching an effort to recall Napier, Sawatzky and Scafani, all of whom took office after the November election, with Napier winning her seat after her name was pulled randomly out of a box to break an electoral tie with incumbent Adelene Jones.

That effort took an important early step forward May 27, when proponents served each of the trio of council members with a notice of recall petition signed by the required 30 Blue Lake registered voters. The proponents then posted the petitions in public spaces, as required, in lieu of publishing them in a local newspaper of record, as Blue Lake does not have one. The notice offers two reasons for each of the three recall efforts: the council's decision to part ways with Mager and its decision not to approve the city's overdue Housing Element in the face of threatened fines from the state of California. (The council majority, while declining to discuss anything regarding Mager's departure from the city, has charged that more time is needed to approve a quality Housing Element and have asked the state to be given until the end of the year to do so.)

The notice must now be approved by a local election official — typically a city clerk for a municipal election, though Blue Lake doesn't have one — after which proponents have 40 days to gather the required signatures to qualify the efforts (it's one petition for each council member) for the ballot, which in Blue Lake's case is 30 percent of registered voters, or about 248, depending on the latest registration numbers.

If recall proponents are successful in reaching that threshold before the deadline, the city must declare a recall election within 14 days and then hold that election within 125 days. The city would bear the election's cost.

Speaking to the Times-Standard, Sawatzky said the recall effort was "definitely expected" and charged it is part of an intimidation campaign that has included threats from unnamed residents.

An Unexpected Resignation

Amid all the rancor of a recall effort, Firor, appointed to the council in October to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Elizabeth McKay (who told the Times-Standard she stepped down because she was struggling to deal with the criticism often levied at the council during public comment periods), quietly tapped out.

"Please accept this letter as my formal resignation from my position as city counselor for Blue Lake, effective immediately," Firor wrote in a letter sent to interim City Manager Dani Burkhart and office clerk Tonie Quigley two minutes before the start of the May 27 council meeting. "This decision was not made lightly, but after careful consideration, I believe it is the right time for me to step down."

Firor went on to write that it has been "an honor and a privilege" serving residents of Blue Lake and that he is proud of the work he accomplished. He further wrote that he was grateful for the opportunity to work with "dedicated city staff and engaged citizens," but the letter makes no mention of his council colleagues.

Firor did not respond to multiple Journal inquiries seeking comment for this story.

The council can now decide whether to appoint someone to fill Firor's seat, to go through an application process or to hold a special election. Its next regularly scheduled meeting is June 24. ●

Once Leaders, Newspapers Knuckle Under on DEI

By Edward C. Pease

views@northcoastjournal.com

The Gannett Co., America's largest newspaper chain, recently lost its moral compass, a victim of the miasma of intimidation emanating from the White House.

Gannett, once the nation's loudest voice for racial and ethnic diversity in news operations and content, "will no longer publish demographic and diversity data about its workforce," Harvard's Nieman journalism thinktank reported.

In the mid-1980s, as a junior faculty member in my 30s, I became involved in the national effort by the American Newspaper Publishers Association (ASNE) to diversify its workforce. The goal was to staff newspaper newsrooms with more people of different races, cultures and backgrounds to help newspapers report more fully and accurately on America. All of America.

The rationale was both ethical and pragmatic, David Lawrence Jr., then-publisher of Gannett's Miami Herald and president of ASNE, said in 1991. "Moral in the sense that [a diverse workforce] . . . is simply a matter of being fair," he said. "Practical in the sense that it is absolutely crucial to the future of our business."

It was not a new concept. Back in the mid-1960s during the Civil Rights era, when race riots spread across the country, the violence caught the news business napping. One reason, editors and publishers said, was that their news-rooms were almost 100 percent White. "We can't find qualified" Black reporters, editors said in 1968.

Newspapers began concerted efforts to recruit more people of color to report on the communities that white journalists didn't know. The goal was not just to cover different kinds of stories for Black people, but to inform the larger society about itself.

In 1988, as a graduate student at Ohio University, with financial support from my university and corporate sponsors, I founded and directed an intensive training program, the Midwest Newspaper Workshop for Minorities. We reckoned that if newspapers couldn't find qualified journalists of color, we'd train some. Similar training programs were created at other universities.

The most enthusiastic backer of these efforts was the Gannett Foundation, which provided funding, and Gannett newspapers in our area, which sent their journalists to help with training and — importantly — committed to hire workshop graduates for at least a year.

It saddens me beyond words to learn that Gannett has abandoned its commitment to helping its readers and communities learn about all of the American experience. Diversity, equity and inclusion is part of the American soul, part of what brought so many different people here yearning to be free to live, work and prosper. The Trump administration's assault on diversity and inclusion is evidence of its determination to dismantle essential parts of the American experience.

In 1946, Robert Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago and chairman of the presidential Commission on Freedom of the Press, explained the societal importance of diversity of thought and perspective in the press.

"The tremendous influence of the modern press makes it imperative that the great agencies of mass communication show hospitality to ideas which their owners do not share," Hutchins said. "Otherwise, these ideas will not have a fair chance."

Likewise, without a workforce that reflects variety and diversity, the press cannot reflect all of America. In 1991, nearly 50 years later, the Miami Herald's David Lawrence reflected Hutchins's philosophy: "My own life experiences do not provide a complete and unabridged perspective on what is important to others in this world. That is why I must 'people' my newspaper with folks who know something more about many things than I."

But at the new Gannett, instead of "We lead with inclusion," the new corporate line is, "At Gannett, everyone can thrive." That's good, but not the same. ●

Co-op Donation Brings Food for People Closer to Challenge Goal to Offset Trump Cuts

Food for People's efforts to offset a huge, DOGE-induced funding loss got a boost recently, when the North Coast Co-op pledged to add $3,500 to the Farmers Fund challenge, encouraging community members who are also able to contribute to the effort to help both local farmers and food-insecure households.

"The North Coast Co-op is excited to be part of this fundraising challenge that supports two things we care about highly, getting nutritious food to those who need it the most in our community while supporting our local farmers," Co-op Sponsors and Donations Administrator Emily Walter said in a press release.

On March 10, Food for People and the North Coast Grower's Association's Harvest Hub were rattled by news that Trump administration cuts at the United States Department of Agriculture were shuttering a program — the Local Food Purchase Assistance Cooperative Agreement — that was providing Food for People about $360,000 annually to purchase produce from local farms through the North Coast Growers Association's Harvest Hub. The program had reverberating impacts, helping the food bank secure thousands of pounds of produce monthly for its approximately 21,000 clients, while supporting local farms by purchasing food with funds from outside the county that then went to pay local wages and support local families.

After hearing of the cut, Food for People supporters Melanie Williams and Barbara Goldberg pledged to match $50,000 worth of donations made to the food bank's Locally Delicious Farmers Fund, which is used to purchase produce solely from local farms.

"When we learned this vital funding had been cut, we felt a sense of urgency," Williams and Goldberg said in the press release. "The growing season has begun, we can't wait, our local farmers need our financial support now to assure local seniors, children and tribal people have healthy food again this season."

With the Co-op's recent pledge, the challenge to meet Williams and Goldberg's $50,000 match has now raised $42,000, sitting $8,000 short of its goal with a looming June 7 deadline.

Donations can be made to Food for People's Locally Delicious Farmers Fund by mail (PO Box 4922, Eureka, CA 95502) or online at foodforpeople.org.

Fair Board to Host Town Hall to Gather Entertainment Ideas

With horseracing in the far back stretch as an option for entertainment, the Humboldt County Fair board and staff are seeking input from the public on what to do next. A town hall is scheduled for Monday, June 9, at 7 p.m. in the fairgrounds' Turf Room.

HCFA CEO Moira Kenny cautioned the board during its May 27 meeting that expectations should be modest for the upcoming fair, which is now only three months away. Some suggestions for use of the arena and grandstands — including a Monster Truck Rally and demolition derby — have already been ruled out due to cost and the noise restrictions included in the fairgrounds' Conditional Use Permit (CUP).

"I did strongly recommend that if we did move forward with a town hall meeting of any sort we were very clear on parameters — we're at 90 days here," said Kenny, referring to a previous meeting with the Executive Committee, during which she expressed the opinion that a town hall could potentially “backfire” on staff if none of the suggestions were ones that could be implemented.

“I think it’s really important to have a town hall,” said Director Jack Rice. “We have so many changes this year. We should be getting input, letting the community ask questions. ‘Here’s what’s happening, here’s what we’re planning, what would you suggest to help us be successful this year?’ They could be just as upset with us for sitting in our little boardroom and making decisions without input.”

Director Clint Duey agreed, but suggested they widen the scope of the meeting’s purpose to be about “moving forward” rather than actionable items for the fair in August, which might help with expectations. Duey suggested a “tough mudder” obstacle course race might be popular; Director Lawrence Dwight said many people had suggested staging a concert. Kenny said staff had considered what they were calling “a day of races” with several different categories of competitors, from corgis to humans in costume.

Whatever takes the place of horse racing this year must be cost-effective; per Kenny, no money is currently budgeted for extra entertainment, and recent financial reports show the organization working within a tight margin to stay solvent. The fair is the association’s biggest fundraiser of the year, and it remains to be seen if the lack of racing as an attendance draw will break the 129-year old institution’s budget.

Reached for comment after the meeting, Board President Andy Titus said this is a “pivotal time” for the association and said he hopes the public will come out for the event.

“I know there’s great ideas out there. I hear them all the time and I’m just hoping those people will actually come to the meeting and put them out there and see if there is anything we can do to make them work,” said Titus.

Sheriff’s Office Identifies Contractor Killed in Landslide as Former Police Sergeant

An employee of a Caltrans contractor was killed before dawn on May 31 during an active landslide on State Route 36 east of Swimmer’s Delight, the agency announced.

The Humboldt County Sheriff’s Office identified the man killed as former Eureka Police Sgt. Rodrigo Reyna-Sanchez, 58, who reportedly took up work with the contracting company after his retirement in 2022.

According to the sheriff’s office, the accident occurred in the 13000 block of State Route 36 at about 5:50 a.m., when a “significant amount of debris” fell from the active landslide.

“The Humboldt County Sheriff’s Office extends its deepest condolences to the family and loved ones of Mr. Reyna-Sanchez during this difficult time,” the press release states.

State Route 36 remains closed due to the active slide and Caltrans advises the traveling public to follow its District 1 social media accounts for the latest updates.

Reyna-Sanchez worked at the Eureka Police Department for 22 years, and received multiple commendations, before he was placed on administrative leave in March of 2021 after the Sacramento Bee reported on group text messages it obtained between him and a unit of officers he supervised. The texts used vulgar, misogynistic and dehumanizing language to describe unhoused residents and women, drawing widespread condemnation.

After a year-long investigation, Reyna-Sanchez, retired in March of 2022 while facing pending disciplinary action from the department, effective immediately.

In a statement, Caltrans extended condolences to Reyna-Sanchez’s family and those who knew him, adding that the safety of the traveling public, department employees and contractors is always the agency’s top priority.

“We extend our sincere condolences to the worker’s family and friends and all who knew and worked with him,” spokesperson Manny Machado said in an emailed statement, adding that the “tragic incident ... serves as a reminder of the risks associated with our work on state highways.”

A HISTORY OF HUMBOLDT COUNTY BASEBALL

Editor's Note: A version of this story first appeared in the Humboldt Historical society's Humboldt Historian in spring of 2014, on the 70th anniversary of the Humboldt Crabs Baseball team. In 2023, after a decade playing as an independent team, the Crabs joined the Pacific Empire League. The oldest continuously operating semi-pro collegiate summer baseball team in America, the Crabs have just begun their 81st season.

In the early days, they were called "Paladini's Humboldt Crabs" in honor of initial sponsorship and support provided by the Paladini Fish Co. While the company name was eventually dropped, the Humboldt Crabs were quickly embraced by the local community as a summer tradition.

Commenting on the chosen name in 1945, according to the official 2001 season program, team founder Lou Bonomini said, "We'll be known as Crabs. Sounds funny but we're serious. We believe we are publicizing one of the widest-known sea-foods on the Pacific coast. No, we won't be crabbing on the field. I'll do my best to field a team that will give the fans here some good baseball. We might drop a few this summer but we'll be in there trying every inning."

BIRTH OF A COMMUNITY TREASURE

In an early 2006 interview, Ned Barsuglia, who himself spent more than a half century working with the Crabs, was emphatic on two critical points about the local baseball team: the amazing contributions of the entire Bonomini family and their decades-long efforts; and the fact that the Humboldt Crabs are a community treasure.

According to Barsuglia, Bonomini built the Crabs on a strong tradition of local baseball. The late 1930s, for example, featured a six-team "Mid County League," which included teams like the Merchants, a team Barsuglia played for as a right fielder/relief pitcher during the summers of 1937 through 1940.

Bonomini himself credited the team's establishment to a strong local baseball tradition that was supported by businesses like Paladini's Fish and Eureka Newspapers Inc.

Beginning his efforts to create the team in 1944, Bonomini led the Crabs to an inaugural opening day on June 17, 1945, and would go on to coach and manage the team for the next 43 years.

Lou Bonomini passed away on Dec. 17, 2000. As part of a eulogy delivered at his funeral four days later, then Crabs board member Carl Del Grande recalled his own years as a batboy for the early Crabs teams, saying, "Unlike today, these Crabs were not college students but rather breadwinners with families to feed. Each had a day job but gave up his weekends for the love of the game and because even in those early days no one said 'no' to Lou Bonomini."

Reciting a roster of local players who might have been present on an early Sunday afternoon, Del Grande identified his own father, as well as player and coach Lou Bonomini, Lou's brother Joe as umpire, Dave Hauger, Rico Pastori, Ed Oliveira, Maury Ayala, Charley Timmons (of Paladini's), Veryl Buffington, Roger Osenbach, Bob Mathews, Frankie Costa, Clarence McLain and Kenny Dunaway. Del Grande said, "It was Louie Bonomini who took a ragtag bunch of locals called the Paladini Humboldt Crabs and led them to national prominence by competing successfully at the National Baseball Congress Championships at Atwater [California], the National Championship Tournament at Wichita, Kansas, and ultimately to the high quality championship teams that we know today."

Other individuals that he credited with contributing to the success of the Humboldt Crabs included Fred Papini (assistant coach), Gabe Vallee (in charge of concessions), Ugo Guintini (running the gate), Frank Salzoni (field conditions) and local media legend Don Terbush (announcer and scorekeeper).

A Newly Accessible ‘Treasure’

By Thadeus Greenon

The Arcata Ball Park got a much needed makeover expanding access to Crabs games for those with mobility challenges this spring, and it's thanks largely to a huge Crabs fan in a high place.

North Coast state Sen. and Senate President pro Tempore Mike McGuire announced that he'd secured $1 million in state funding to overhaul the ballpark façade and make the park compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act back in 2022. After a frenzied push to get the place ready for the Crabs' May 30 opener (some say cement was still being poured a couple days before the first pitch of the season, while others say work continued until about 45 minutes before gates opened), McGuire sounded like a fan at heart when asked by the Journal what prompted him to secure the bulk of the construction funds.

"A North Coast original for over 80 years, Humboldt Crabs baseball is full of family fun," he said. "Nothing says summer like Crabs baseball. When the beloved downtown Arcata stadium needed accessibility work and a facelift, it was an honor to work with the city and Crabs to secure $1 million in state funding for modernization improvements. This is an investment that all of Humboldt will experience and enjoy for decades to come."

Humboldt Crabs Board Member Matt Filar says it's no secret the ballpark has needed accessibility work and a facelift "for a long, long time," but says to his knowledge no one made an official request or plea for the state funding. Rather it seems McGuire and his staff, who hold an annual barbecue event at the ballpark and are Crabs fans, simply identified the need and took it upon themselves to address it.

"We always felt it would be really nice to do it," Filar says. "But we didn't ask anyone to do it. As far as I know, Mike McGuire just decided to do it."

Filar says in addition to aesthetic improvements, the project reduced the pitch of an entry ramp to make it safe and ADA compliant, added ADA access to the park's left field area and installed emergency lighting throughout the park that will keep fans safe in the event of a power outage. He says the organization is very happy with the (almost) finished product. (An ordered entry gate has yet to arrive and some landscaping still needs to be done.)

"It's beautiful. It's really nice," he says, adding that it got rave reviews from many of the more than 1,200 people in attendance on opening night. "It's a block off the plaza and it's a showcase for the city of Arcata."

City Manager Merritt Perry says the city would up contributing about $785,000 to the project from its open space fund, parks and trails special tax, recreation fees and general fund reserves, but it wouldn't have been possible without the state support. Perry says he loves the way the façade looks — with two brick columns forming an entryway under a metal arch with the words "Arcata Ball Park Home of the Humboldt Crabs" cut out — but the accessibility improvements are most exciting.

"Whenever you can make a treasure like the Arcata Ball Park more accessible to everyone, the better," he says.

THE TEAM EVOLVES

Del Grande, quoted in the team's 2001 program, said of Barsuglia, "Fortunately for Louie, back in 1965, a dear friend, Ned Barsuglia, became the team's general manager and took care of the off-field operations and player recruitment."

Interviewed in April of 2006, Barsuglia recalled a few years of transition into his new role with the Crabs, "from '65 to '67. Then in '67 [Bonomini] said, 'Hey, you do some of the recruiting. That's when I brought in some of the players from Santa Barbara and I brought in players from Oregon and Washington. Then the following year we expanded ... and we'd always get two or three Cal or Stanford players."

And it was with those increasingly collegiate teams that Barsuglia seemed to have the most vivid memories of the tournament trips to Wichita. "I remember the great trips that we had where we'd go to Wichita [for the National Baseball Congress World Series]," he recalled. "They were great trips. Going through the Colorado Rockies in the evenings gave you spectacular views of the sunsets. We would leave here and play in Reno. Then we'd go to Provo, Utah, and play a couple of nights there," he continued. "Then we'd go to Grand Junction [Colorado] and play three games there. Then we'd go to Pueblo, Colorado, and play one game there. Then we'd go to the famous western town of Dodge City, Kansas, and play another day there. Then we'd go into Wichita, having played six to eight games on the trip there. And that really seasoned the team."

Barsuglia noted that alternate itineraries took the team "to Fort Smith, Colorado, which always had a good team, then into Boulder, Colorado, to play the collegiate team. Then sometimes we'd stop off to play at Denver. Then we'd go into Wichita. Then we'd come home on Route 66: Liberal, Albuquerque, Flagstaff, Bakersfield, then home. They were great trips. The only thing was that coming home we'd drive straight through for 40 hours, changing drivers."

"I enjoyed Lou," Barsuglia added. "Lou was a great person. ... You know, when Louie and I were together we never had a bad word for each other. We never had any problems. He would run the team on the field and he would see that stuff was in the concession stand, because he had a store."

Barsuglia recalls Bonomini's daughters and wife running the concession stand. "And Ugo Guintini was [in] the ticket office. I took care of the recruiting, hiring the help and operations. Louie ran the team. And it was great.”

— Ned Barsuglia

The team also traveled well beyond Route 66 during this period. “I remember when we had that Alaskan League in ’67 to ’72,” Barsuglia said. “We had the San Rafael Braves, which was a team that one of the major league scouts ran. We had Eugene, Oregon. We had the Bellingham Bells. We had Fairbanks and Anchorage. And we had the Sparks Nuggets. And we had Grand Junction. We had that league then. And that league went on for five years and the Crabs won it three out of the five years. That was one of the nicest leagues there was. The only problem was that when we went north, we’d be gone for a week. Then we’d have to go some weekend to San Rafael.”

Asked about his own memories of Bonomini’s “retirement” from the Crabs, Barsuglia characterized it as “a real sad day. ... His last year was ’86,” he said, adding that the decision caught him by surprise.

“It just came out of the blue,” he explained. “He called me one day and said, ‘I’m quittin’.’ And boy, when Lou said he was quittin’ he really was quittin’. When he said, ‘This is it,’ it really was it.”

Barsuglia recalled his response: “I said, ‘You can’t quit.’ But he said, ‘You can run it.’ And I was fortunate.”

Barsuglia identified some of that good fortune as having Tom Giacomini replace Bonomini as coach, adding, “When Louie quit, Tom Giacomini’s wife and son and daughter ran it for the next four years. And when Tom got Athletic Director [at College of the Redwoods] in the fall of ’91, that was his last year. Then we had to bring in different coaches. We brought in Steve Neal, who played for the Crabs and had the home run record for many years until Troy Schader — it had been 20 until Schader came through with 23. So Tom’s boy and girl ran the concession stand while Ugo [Guintini] ran the gate My son-in-law helped running the gate when Ugo wanted the day off ... and we operated that way through ’94.” Barsuglia’s other family members performed many of the critical support roles during this period.

PREPARING FOR A SECOND HALF CENTURY

In 1995, Barsuglia announced that the time had come for him to step down as well and, with no obvious protégé being trained, it appeared that the Humboldt Crabs would fold after a half century of baseball.

It was at this point that Jerry Nutter figuratively stepped up to the plate and "saved the Crabs." The father of former Crabs' pitcher Matt Nutter, Jerry applied his broad expertise as the retired president of the Orange County YMCA to transition the Crabs from a small operation supported by overworked family members to a not-for-profit community benefit organization run by a volunteer board of directors numbering nearly two dozen.

Barsuglia retained the role as "chief scout" for the evolving organization.

A small point of local historic debate has emerged as a result of subsequent interviews in which Barsuglia has said on a few occasions that he may have "hedged" on his threats to close the team in '95.

For example, in April 2006, he stated, "And then when I told them I was quitting it was quite a shock to some people. But I already had the team. I had the schedule. So I thought, 'Well, I'll say I'm quittin' and if nobody takes it, I guess I'll have to run it another year.' And it was just fortunate that Matt Nutter decided that he would like to take it over with his dad [Jerry]. His dad didn't know anything about baseball at the time, but we sat down two or three times a week and talked about the Crabs and he got onto it. He's done a good job."

But the reality is that, regardless of how it might have been characterized later, most people familiar with the situation are convinced that the Crabs would have never entered their second half-century without the guidance and efforts of Jerry Nutter and his ability to create the viable structure that continues to provide Humboldt County with quality summer baseball. ●

NCJ GET OUT

Crabs Open Season with a Sweep of the Novato Knicks

By Brandon Dixon
getout@northcoastjournal.com

The last Friday in May was the beginning of the newest chapter for the Humboldt Crabs. The ballpark has gotten a facelift, the team has turned over, but the sounds, smells and ambiance are all the same. The Crab Grass band, photographer Matt Filar and the notorious hecklers were all in attendance, primed and ready.

One of the familiar faces, local Miles Standish, in his third summer as a Crab, would get the call to the mound to open the season. "They let me know Thursday night and I was just really excited. I grew up coming to Crabs games and I wasn't really expecting it, but it's always been a dream of mine," said Standish, a 6-foot-2-inch southpaw from College of the Redwoods. The lefty would make the most of the opportunity, giving up one run on three hits over five innings, while striking out six. "I was throwing mostly fastballs and change-ups, goin' hard in and using my change-up away. I was just trying to get ahead and stay in the zone," he said. "I really trust Kawana [Soares] back there. I love throwing to him."

Soares, the Crabs opening night catcher from Hawaii, is back for another summer in Arcata after taking last summer off. "It's awesome being back. When I was here before, I was so impressed with the fans and the atmosphere, and the energy at the ballpark. It's been fun to come back and see how some of the local kids have grown, and see some of the familiar faces in the crowd. I love playing here," said Soares. One of the biggest leaps Soares has seen was in his starting pitcher. "Miles' velocity is up, he has better command, he has a different presence. It was really cool to see how he's progressed and he threw great. I'm glad he got the call on opening night."

After the Crabs took an early 1-0 lead in the third inning, the Novato Knicks would answer back to tie the score in the fourth. The Crabs would take the lead back in the fifth inning, but a two-run home run would then give the Knicks a one-run lead in the sixth. The Crabs proved resilient, though. In their half of the frame, the boys would answer with two runs of their own. A Sutter Moss single followed by a wild pitch and a double from Adam Enyart would tie the game. A walk would advance the runners and set up Parker Rogers to drive in a run on a fielder's choice. The Crabs would not look back. Kayden Kohlberg would come on for two flawless innings of relief to earn the save. He struck out three batters and the good guys walked away victorious on opening night, 4-3.

Saturday night's contest would be just as back and forth, but with one of the strangest finishes you'll see at the ballpark. After four scoreless innings of relief from Peter Caldera, RBI singles from both Nolan Hamilton and Rodgers would put the Crabs up 3-1 in the seventh. The Knicks would answer with two runs scored with two outs in the eighth to set up a wild ninth inning for the Crabs. Some games are won with blood, sweat and tears, but Saturday night was won with bruises. The bottom of the ninth would see three batters hit by pitches. A fourth batter was hit, but because it hit his bat on the way to his sternum it was called a foul ball. Ultimately, the Crabbies would "walk it off" after the Knicks pitcher's continued struggles to find the strike zone resulted in the Crabs taking game two, 4-3.

Sunday, the bats came alive. Starter David Zazueta put together a solid start, striking out eight, but also struggled with the zone, walking five. The Crabs would put up five runs in the second, two in the fourth, three in the fifth, two in the sixth, and another five in the seventh. The barrage would prove to be too much for the Knicks, and the Crabs would roll 17-7 behind three RBIs apiece from Soares, Keenan Morris, Moss and Cayden Lee. The brooms were broken out and the Crabs open the season with a 3-0 sweep of the Novato Knicks. The boys are back in action Wednesday Night against the Humboldt Eagles, before opening a three-game series against the Fresno A's. See you all at the yard. Go, Crabs, go!

NCJ ON THE TABLE

A Ranking of Snack Shack Eats at the Arcata Ball Park

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill

jennifer@northcoastjournal.com

Trips to the concessions stand are part of the baseball experience — central to it, for some of us. At the Arcata Ball Park, the tab is surprisingly inexpensive, with food items topping out at $9, a pittance compared to big stadiums. This leaves you with a little extra to earn a “Tip, tip, hooray!” from the staff. (They’re too busy to dwell on a missed tip, but trust that everyone behind you will notice the silence.) We’ve also got a strong lineup on the whiteboard menu. Pro tip: Extra cheese — nacho or shredded — on the side or atop whatever you’re having is available for a small charge. As for other customizations, concessions manager Genie Dickinson says, “You talk to one of us and we will make it happen.” Here are our top picks for dining around the diamond.

8. Veggie dog ($6). A split and fried herby Impossible dog on a white bun, it’s fine. It’s a veggie dog. Unadorned, it is a bit of an also-ran but the animals you’re sparing by keeping it vegetarian would want you to be happy. Hit the toppings bar and take this thing to Chicago with tomatoes and pickles. Get a side order of chopped onions, some shredded cheese and pickled jalapeño slices. Then eat some of your neighbor’s nachos.

7. Nachos ($6). Ah, snack shack nachos. The paper boat strains under a pile of salty, circular tortilla chips, a variety found only at parks and movie theaters, doused in canned Ortega nacho cheese and crowned with pickled jalapeño slices. Don’t scoff at canned nacho cheese: It’s the gold standard for staying hot and un-separated for the trip back to the stands, and it maintains dip-ability even during a breezy night game. It’s also your best bet for sharing because your friend with the veggie dog is definitely reaching over.

6. Cheeseburger ($9). Here we have a straightforward, ½-inch-thick patty cooked on a flat-top grill, topped with American cheese and actually centered on a white bun. Curly Greenleaf lettuce, sliced tomatoes, ketchup, mayo and mustard are all at your disposal. It’s basic but solid, a ballpark bargain and a gamer.

The bounty of the ballpark.

Photos by Jennifer Fumiko Cahill

5. Burrito ($6). Pre-rolls from Pati-no's Mexican Food, these aren't quite as marvelous as the made-to-order you'll get lining up at the truck (those are delightful, treat yourself sometime), but with scratch-made beans and rice, the beef, chicken and pork options far surpass the usual grab-and-go variety. Don't forget to ask for salsa on the side.

4. Chocolate chip cookie ($2). The candy calls but consider letting your sweet tooth chomp on this oversized cookie made by Cal Poly Humboldt's dining services. It's perfectly browned, crispy-chewy and chip heavy, buttery with a hint of salt. This is the kind of cookie that launched a thousand Little Leaguers — simple, classic and utterly wholesome.

3. Hot dog ($5). The foil-wrapped ¼-pound Nathan's beef dog hits the spot for traditionalists. There's no relish or kraut, if that's a dealbreaker for you, but it is the unfussy original, coming in hot. And friends, in the open, accepting atmosphere of Arcata, nobody will judge you for putting ketchup on it. Unless you're with the visiting team — in which case, expect brutal heckling.

2. Pie ($6). Not every ballpark has pie. The home of the Crabs, however, is blessed with selections from Slice of Humboldt Pie. It may be unconventional, but the wedge of Peach-Berry Crumble, with its purple-to-orange ombre, cinnamon crumb topping and thick, lightly salty bottom crust is perfect for a summer sunset at the game. Depending how the game is going, Chocolate Silk might be the dessert to feed your feelings. Check the whiteboard for daily options and keep in mind the shop is mere blocks away at 660 K St. if you need more pie later to celebrate victory or wallow in Mudville.

1. Chili dog ($7). Is this technically better than the pie? No. It is, however, the best thing to eat at the ballpark. Because somewhere under that ladle's worth of canned chili (connoisseurs may wish to inquire as to whether tonight's offering is Stag), shredded cheese and chopped onion is that same hefty Nathan's hot dog — impossible to eat with decorum and unlikely to stay off your shirt. Friend, you are not at a table, bound to the strictures of etiquette. You are not even hunched over your sad desk lunch. You are at a ballgame, with everyone's attention on the drama unfolding on the field. Here, amid the raucous music of the World Famous Crab Grass Band, the wild cheers and the lawless hecklers, the chili dog bids you to follow its messy example: Return to your primal, napkin-crumpling self and become ungovernable. ●

NCJ SETLIST

Talkin' Baseball

By Collin Yeo

setlist@northcoastjournal.com

Summer comes in pieces, with many unofficial starting points before the solstice. Around here, one of those points is the beginning of the Crabs' baseball season, which started Friday. Opening night is always a big deal in Arcata, with people of all ages filling the metal bleachers and picnic tables to root for the home team, the oldest continually running semi-pro collegiate team in the country. The packed crowd hums with not only the energy of the game, but the pursuit of drinks, eats and treats, and a shared vibrancy rivaling the warm, giddy joy of life seen among the mayflies, swallows and red-winged blackbirds curling and singing under the long sun. But I'm the music guy, here to drop some information about another irreplaceable tradition tacked onto the larger show surrounding the lighted diamond. I'm talking about the live music, thundering and delightful, rolling between the innings like salutary cannon-fire. I'm talking about the Crab Grass Band, supplying a soundtrack to the action since the summer of 1983. I spoke to co-founder Hugh Scanlon for a little rundown on the group's history.

Scanlon is eager to show appreciation for those who helped get the ball rolling 42 years ago, when he was a forestry major at Humboldt State University. Most of his compatriots were from different academic disciplines and the project was never an offshoot of the university's music program.

"A few of my friends and I were sitting in the stands at one of the games in the middle of summer, and we started talking about how the games could be more exciting with a little music, and gosh, this would be a good time to play." Inspired by seeing live music between innings at Giants games at Candlestick Park, Scanlon, a trombone player with a proficiency in reading and arranging music, approached the Crabs organization with his friends and offered to play between innings. A deal was struck for free beer and hot dogs, and the Crab Grass Band, little more than a jazz combo, was born.

"This will be our 41st year of playing, minus the pandemic, when everything was shut down." He continues with a quick overview of how the group expanded, both in sound by opening the setlist to tunes outside of the jazz and marching band repertoire, and through community outreach.

"We always wanted to be a part of the community, with locals coming from outside the college to play. People would ask how they could be a part of the band and we told them to show up," Scanlon says. The tryouts were simple: bring an instrument, be able to read charts and have a desire to play. He notes how the music changed, too, with people bringing their own ideas for popular songs to play and finding ways to select the tunes with the most punch in the small time provided, arranged in a key that worked for the entire ensemble, without disrupting the operation as a whole.

"Our conductor is always making eye contact with the announcer so we don't step on his toes," Scanlon says. Beyond that, there's also a protocol for playing songs to rile up the fans when the home team steps up to the plate.

"We try to make things peppy when the Crabs are coming up to bat and a little more casual when it's the opposing team," although, Scanlon notes, "We do take requests from the visiting players and sometimes remember their favorite songs for when they come back. We want people to have fun, and it's always fun to see the other players dancing and shaking it, too."

Other requests come from the musicians. Scanlon says that he tries to keep it fresh, mentioning a favorite is an electronic dance track from 2017 by Narco called "Timmy Trumpet," which he brought to the group. Along with the songbook, the group has expanded, with the most players appearing on opening day, before settling into around 15-20 players for most of the season, including some junior high school students. On their first performance this year, Scanlon informed me there were over a dozen saxophone players alone.

Among them was alto sax player Janna Ostoya, who has been with the Crab Grass Band since the '90s, and whose husband plays in the group as well. She says throughout the years of lineup changes, the overall vibe has stayed the same, which is always exciting, and “delicious in a way that goes perfectly with a hot dog and a beer.”

The Crab Grass Band serenades the crowd at the Arcata Ball Park on Friday, June 6 at 7 p.m.

Even if, like myself, you’re not much of a hot dog eater or beer drinker, there’s a larger truth at work there, like the joyful perambulations of the many noisy citizens of summer — human, winged and otherwise. I’ll tip a glass to that. Go Crabs.

Thursday

The Arcata Theatre Lounge is hosting Thursdaze, the dancehall and reggae dance fest curated by DJs Sarge One, Rundat, Tanasa Ras and featuring the Fox Den Dancers. The fun starts at 9 p.m., and it’s only $10 to get in the door.

Friday

If you’d like to catch the Crab Grass Band in action between innings — and watch some baseball, too, I suppose — come out to the Arcata Ball Park tonight at 7 p.m. for the first game in a hometown series against the Fresno A’s. Yes, I call it the Ball Park and not Crabs Stadium because big lights and a few bleachers does not a stadium make, but it’s still a big fun time ($10 general, $4 kids 3-12).

Saturday

It’s a big show night tonight, which will hopefully make up for two quiet nights in the beginning of next week. Here’s what’s on the marquee for the evening. At 5 p.m.,

the Eureka Vets Hall is the venue for a benefit show for missing native man Ray Tsatoke, featuring Oakland grindcore band Bob Plant, power violence quartet Hong Kong Fuck You! from Tijuana, Mexico, Malandro, and locals Malicious Algorithm, Sew, Gourmandizer, Kolonizer and Brain-Dead Rejects ($15).

Over at the Arcata Playhouse at 7 p.m., the Creative Sanctuary presents the fourth show in the Jazz is Peace series called Right Here, Right Now, with original compositions by James Zeller and Katie Belknap, as well as some classics picked for the occasion and played by the aforementioned duo along with Humboldt Jazz Collective members Matthew Seno, Ramsey Isaacs, Ron Lee and Tree. Expect words and themes from Thich Nhat Hanh, MLK, Ursula K. LeGuin and bell hooks. Admission is a sliding scale $15-$30.

And finally, Sugar Boys are playing their last show and album release at the Wild Hare Tavern at 8 p.m. Also on board is the group The Disheveled, a name that could describe any number of rock bands in the area ($10).

Sunday

Another Sunday, another afternoon matinee of choral music at the Arcata Playhouse. This week it’s the McKinleyville Community Choir presenting its Spring concert at 3 p.m. Admission is donation only. Enjoy.

Monday and Tuesday

Remember those quiet nights I mentioned on Saturday? Well, they’re here. You’re on your own, so hang in there, kittens. Tomorrow night is going to be special.

Wednesday

Pierre Bensusan is a French-Algerian acoustic guitarist who has managed over a 50-year career to not only carve out his own sound from the brilliant force of his unique playing, but to become the master of one of the more versatile guitar tunings, DADGAD, which forms a bridge from Ireland to North Africa with its enigmatic, neither minor nor major key signature sound. I first became aware of his work as a young kid from a song bearing his last name and written in homage to him by the late master Michael Hedges, and have been a fan ever since. He is truly one of the greats, a world class musician and it will be a rare treat to hear him play in the intimate splendor of the Arcata Playhouse. The show starts at 7:30 p.m., and at $20 a ticket, you’d be wise to snag one ASAP. ●

Collin Yeo (he/him) likes the way the stark lights of the field evaporate into the cool darkness of the surrounding night, leaving the tight focus of the game to join the ceaseless inquisition of the sky. A triple play or grand slam isn’t too shabby either.

THEATER. MUSIC. COMMUNITY.

9 to 5: The Musical Clocks in at FRT

By Doranna Benker Gilkey

frontrow@northcoastjournal.com

You don't have to be a fan of Dolly Parton to appreciate 9 to 5: The Musical, now at Fern-dale Repertory Theatre, but if you are, you'll probably love it even more. . . The music and lyrics are written by Parton, the book by Patricia Resnick. It's of course based on the 1980 movie by the same name, starring Parton, who also wrote the music for the movie. Parton knows something about achieving success as a woman in a man's world; the backstory for one of the main characters is modeled on her story. Here, three women take control of their destinies at a grueling corporate office and get a little sweet revenge along the way.

Violet (Veronica Ruse) is a supervisor of secretaries at the generically named Consolidated Business, where she's been a longtime, hardworking and loyal employee. She's a single mother and sole provider for her family. She has corporate ambitions that have been thwarted time and again by male co-workers of lower caliber. Violet is our down-to-earth cynic who becomes a reluctant hero. She meets her newest supervisee Judy (Holly Portman) and quickly finds out Judy has no secretarial experience whatsoever. In fact, Judy has very little experience outside the home at all, having spent her entire adulthood as a housewife who's just left her cheating husband and struck out on her own for the first time. She is our innocent on a journey of self-discovery. When Doralee (Jessie Rawson) takes the stage with bright, buxom confidence, Violet is quick to let Judy know (sotto voce), "We don't like her." Doralee has dreams of her own, but she takes the brunt of the boss's horrid, sexist behavior and is shunned by the other women in the workplace. She's our Jessica Rabbit.

The protagonists overcome their differences to band together and stand up to their horrible, egotistical, bigoted, sexist boss Franklin Hart (Tyler Egerer). Egerer gives an amazing antagonist performance — a good bad guy can make or break a show, and Egerer gives us his best worst. His over-the-top, even shocking, leers and gyrations make the audience hate Hart quickly. He may be the common enemy but his abuses have affected the protagonists in very different ways.

Veronica Ruse and Holly Portman in 9 to 5: The Musical.

Ruse gives Violet a competent, grounded energy combined with the vulnerability of thwarted ambition. Violet knows her worth. At no point is she seeking Hart's personal approval, she just needs him to get out of the way of her promotion to a job worthy of her. Judy is a sharp contrast to Violet: She doesn't know what she wants or who she is. Portman plays Judy with an almost painful insecurity, the better to show her change through the story as she grows a backbone. Portman's range of physical performance from the small, quiet Judy to the one taking up space and volume as she finds her strength is impressive. Doralee is subjected to the grossest of Hart's behavior. She doesn't let his objectification of her get her down, but she is hurt when her co-workers likewise won't see past her glamor and cup size. Rawson embodies the down-home country girl in the big city with her performance of Doralee. Parton would be proud.

The songs are great, of course, and the cast does its level best with them, with varying levels of success. Every cast member gives it their all, and that shines through the whole show, but especially in "Hart to Hart," Roz's (Roux Kats) burlesque number, "Let Love Grow," the sweet duet between Violet and Joe (Craig Woods), and Judy's climactic number "Get out and Stay Out."

The titular song was No. 1 on the music charts when it came out, catchy, poppy, energetic and fun. (It's been stuck in my head for days now.) It sets the tone of the musical as the opening number, but the energy of its accompanying choreography doesn't always keep up with the music. A number of the ensemble numbers have a similar disconnect. In contrast, the solos, especially Egerer on the desk, have great movement with them, adding to the story.

Dillon Savage's direction gives the musical an enjoyable fairytale feel and the cast seems encouraged to lean hard into their characters, from leads to ensemble. The melodrama fits well with the revenge plot and character growth, but the musical isn't nuanced enough to work as a comment on discrimination in the workplace or women's rights. It uses those themes for the challenges that the heroines grow through, but is a poor study on the themes themselves. Instead, it's a fairytale of good vs. evil and the power of believing in yourself. And it's glamorous and authentic at the same time, just like Dolly. ●

This summer, Sundays are made for music in the garden. From June 1 through Oct. 26, the Events Lawn at Humboldt Botanical Garden becomes a stage for local and regional talent, offering everything from salsa to soul and jazz to bluegrass during the garden's popular Summer Music Series. Concerts run Sundays from 1 to 3 p.m. in a family-friendly, picnic-perfect setting. Bring your own snacks or enjoy beer, wine and refreshments for purchase on site. This Sunday, June 8, catch the bright summer sounds of Pan Dulce, Humboldt's 30-piece steel drum orchestra. Get the full summer music schedule and more information at hbfg.org.

Friendship Gets Uncomfortable

By John J. Bennett
screens@northcoastjournal.com

FRIENDSHIP. For a certain, ardent segment of the population, the mere image of Tim Robinson and Paul Rudd — the former clad in a sort of schlubbier, tan on tan, Walter White winter ensemble, the latter sporting a handlebar mustache and 1980s elementary schoolboy fashion-goals jacket — is enough to provoke a giggling fit subsiding in a feeling of calm, overall wellness. I am, of course, firmly of this camp; my lovely and long-suffering wife is not. She did, however, agree to join me for a matinee showing of Friendship, at the end of which she had little to say.

Days later, she would forward me an anonymous online response to a post about the movie, including insights such as: “This movie sucked so hard. ... A fever dream for psychopaths.” She would go on to say, “I don’t know if I thought it sucked but I do question how this deep discomfort is enjoyable.” And therein lies the rubicon of Tim Robinson’s (to me) undeniable, singular appeal.

Friendship, the feature debut from writer/director Andrew DeYoung, trades heavily on the persona Robinson cultivates in his own written material (the sit-com Detroiters, the transcendent sketch series I Think You Should Leave), a kind-hearted, inept, rage-adjacent suburbanite with a penchant for miscue and escalation. His brand is discomfort, both for himself/his character and for us, the joyfully conspiratorial audience. In sketch and episodic doses, he’ll transition from simmering humiliation to roiling-boil rage with little provocation, festooning his own rapid-cycling emotionality with absurdist premises and motifs. His comedy lines itself up like a row of shot glasses brimming with possibility but promising, even boasting, a rapid-onset emotional hangover.

The challenge, then, even for the faithful, is to allow one of Robinson’s characters the opportunity for prolonged, quiet moments; the weeping clown left alone to think about what he’s done. And as risky as his own work can be, in terms of squandering the audience’s goodwill, the thought experiment of putting him through the meat-grinder of his own misunderstanding and maladroitness for 100 minutes — well, it’s clearly not for all tastes.

In a wintry, unnamed American state, Craig Waterman (Robinson) “enjoys” middling success as a corporate functionary in an advertising firm cohabited by noxious bros who don’t want him in on their jokes. His wife Tami (Kate Mara), a cancer survivor with a growing floral arrangement business and some attachment issues to both her firefighter ex-boyfriend and her and Craig’s teenage son, is obviously tired of his/their ennui.

One day, when yet another package is misdelivered to the Waterman address, Craig takes it upon himself to deliver it to the rightful recipient, at which point he falls hopelessly in platonic love. New neighbor Austin (Rudd), a television weatherperson in whose kind eyes Craig sees infinite possibility, offers an opportunity for camaraderie; Craig goes full Tim Robinson. And so, what began as a study in bedroom-community malcontent rapidly spirals into a grand, misbegotten attempt to capture that most elusive of prey: coolness.

It goes without saying that Craig is not, will not be cool, and neither will his fractured attempts to mimic what he sees in Austin, himself perhaps not quite as fully formed or self-assured as he might seem. Soon enough, he’s smoking cigarettes in frustration, buying drum kits and creating a frightening scenario that eventually requires first-responder intervention. It’s a car crash in slow motion, looped and distorted and engineered to maximize our discomfort — the experiment is a success.

While Friendship cannot rise to the mania of Robinson’s best sketches (even if that were possible, it would be inadvisable as no one would survive), it is smart enough to stretch out a canvas of comedic dread on which the fully, admirably committed cast can create moments of hideous, ridiculous hilarity. This effect is heightened by the work of director of photography Andy Rydzewski, whose camerawork builds an atmosphere of subdued surreality, a normal neighborhood nightmarishness punctuated by subtle smudges of psychedelia. The final impression is one of intention and completeness: Somehow DeYoung et al. successfully expand the unlikely star quality of Robinson, with all his frustration, sadness and charm, from the smallest of frames to a large format, allowing the comedy and tragedy of the piece to breathe in fully before each explosive exhalation.

Mushroom hunters: “Let’s go to a secret spot I know in the woods. I’ll bring a knife.”

The cinema of awkwardness is its own precious, delicate medium, wherein too much of any one impulse can easily spoil the intention. And while to some Friendship is as rotten as they come, I think it strikes the most delicate of balances, allowing us entry into a familiar but thankfully foreign world where stupid (ultimately too relatable) behavior results in painful, if comic, consequences. Like when Craig, having cavalierly eaten the wrong foraged mushrooms, vomits into his own giant soda. R. 100M. BROADWAY, MINOR. ●

Beyond Apples

Freshly harvested feijoas with a Meyer lemon tree in the background.

Living in a special place like coastal Northern California, with its cool summers and wet winters, the challenge for a dyed-in-the-wool fruit grower is to find every possible fruit tree that might grow successfully here. Cool summers make it especially difficult for many types of fruit to ripen fully, and wet winters make it easy for fungal diseases to take hold. Here, I will describe a few uncommon fruit tree species worth planting.

Pawpaw (Asimina triloba) is a fruit tree native to the eastern U.S. that was first recognized as an important food source by Indigenous peoples. It is related to custard-apple and cherimoya, with which it shares a similar texture and flavor. The fruit has soft flesh, large seeds and a “tropical” flavor. Pawpaw trees need consistent moisture throughout their growing season, soil that is rich in organic matter and full sun for fruit production (but light shade for the first few years). With pawpaw’s increasing popularity, there are now many improved cultivars to choose from, such as Taytoo and Overleese. Pawpaw is not sold in markets because of its short shelf life but its tasty flavor makes it well worth growing.

Meyer lemon trees (Citrus x meyeri) have become a common sight in North Coast gardens. They are a hybrid of an orange and a lemon, making the fruit sweeter and less acidic than a standard lemon. The Meyer lemon has so many culinary uses that it is a must for a fruit garden, and the fruit keeps extremely well both on the tree and in storage. When salt-preserved, the lemons last even longer and provide a bright tang to savory dishes. The tree itself is a beautiful shiny-leafed evergreen with spring-blooming flowers that have a sweet, rich floral scent with a whiff of musk. Like most citrus, it is sensitive to cold. On frosty nights I place an electric warming cable under the tree and if the temperature dips into the 20s, I cover the tree with fabric.

Feijoa (Feijoa sellowiana), aka pineapple guava, is a fruit tree from South America that has gained popularity in California recently, although it has been sold in nurseries as a dazzling ornamental for many years due to its showy white flowers with long, deep red stamens. The petals are sweet and fleshy, and eagerly sought out by birds. For me, feijoa is a must-have fruit. The soft creamy flesh has a mild sweet-tart piney or pineapple flavor. For the best flavor and size of fruit, plant only named cultivars, particularly those among the new selections from New Zealand. In my experience, feijoa is relatively cold tolerant; I have never covered my tree on frosty nights and it has never had frost damage. The only downside is that the fruit ripens very late in November and not at all in some years.

Chilean guava (Ugni molinae) is a woody evergreen shrub, slow growing here on the North Coast, with glossy, dark green leaves. The fruit is brownish red with the texture and size of a blueberry. It often has the flavor and fragrance of strawberry and melon, but they vary depending on where the fruit is grown. I use Chilean guava in quick breads and muffins — it should work well in any recipe that asks for blueberries. I have successfully grown the shrub in Eureka but in Fieldbrook, it gets frost-damaged every year. Still, I highly recommend it for lower frost regions of Humboldt.

These are just a few of the more unusual plants I have tried over the years. Most of the others did not outright die but were so susceptible to diseases or mite and insect infestations that they were impractical to grow. I have not lost my appetite to grow new exotic fruits and will be on the lookout for more when the nursery catalogs come out this winter. ●

Kerima Christiane Furniss (née Dees)

June 1, 1959 – May 11, 2025

Kerima Christiane Furniss passed away peacefully on Sunday, May 11, 2025, in Eureka, California, at the age of 65. Born in Berlin on June 1, 1959, Kerima crossed oceans to find her true home and loves in Arcata, California, where the welcoming spirit of the community and the strength of her Universal Sufi spiritual path sustained her.

A gifted therapist and devoted social worker, Kerima spent much of her career caring for others, most notably at the very hospice where she would one day be surrounded by love and comfort in her final days. Her life's work was never just a job—it was a calling, an expression of her deep empathy and unwavering commitment to the well-being of others.

She was also a gifted visual artist. Formally trained in pottery, Kerima's creative voice extended into painting and mixed-media work, reflecting her deep connection to nature, spirit, and emotion. Her pieces will be on display at her celebration of life, offering a final glimpse into the world as she saw it—vibrant, textured, and full of quiet beauty.

She is survived by her step-children, Megan and Liam Furniss; her former spouse, Michael Furniss; her parents, Rudolf and Uta Dees; her siblings, Jeanne and Mario; and her beloved Australian Shepherd, Mukkala.

Kerima will be remembered for her grace in motion. She loved to dance—whether in ceremony, celebration, or solitude. She often skillfully led the Dances of Universal Peace in Arcata. She was a traveler at heart, always open to new places and people, carrying with her a quiet curiosity and reverence for life in all its forms.

In her final year, Kerima was held in care by an extraordinary circle of friends—an extended chosen family who walked beside her with devotion, laughter, tenderness, and strength. Their love was a reflection of the community she spent her life building, and the profound impact she had on those around her.

Her presence was peaceful and grounding, her compassion boundless. She listened deeply, loved generously, and walked through the world with a softness that made space for others to heal.

A celebration of Kerima's life will be held in Arcata at a later date. Friends and loved ones will be invited to gather and remember her spirit together. Details will be shared when available. You may contact the family or make a donation at SacredFamilyGroves@gmail.com. Donations will be applied to a sanctuary pavilion that Kerima and her sister designed.

NOTICE OF PROPERTY TAX DELINQUENCY AND IMPENDING DEFAULT

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3351, 3352

I, Amy Christensen, Humboldt County Tax Collector, State of California, certify as follows:

That at close of business on June 30, 2025, by operation of law, any real property (unless previously tax-defaulted and not redeemed) that have any delinquent taxes, assessments, or other charges levied for the fiscal year 2024-25, and/or any delinquent supplemental taxes levied prior to the fiscal year 2024-25 shall be declared tax-defaulted.

That unless the tax defaulted property is completely redeemed through payment of all unpaid amounts, together with penalties and fees prescribed by law or an installment plan is initiated and maintained; the property may be sold subsequently at a tax sale to satisfy the tax lien.

That a detailed list of all properties remaining tax-defaulted at the close of business on June 30, 2025, and not redeemed prior to being submitted for publication, shall be published on or before September 8, 2025.

That information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption of tax-defaulted property will be furnished, upon request, by Amy Christensen, Humboldt County Tax Collector at 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, California 95501 (707) 476-2450.

I certify or (declare), under penalty of perjury, that the foregoing is true and correct.

Amy Christensen
Humboldt County Tax Collector

Executed at Eureka, Humboldt County, California, on May 22nd, 2025. Published in the North Coast Journal on May 29th, June 5th & June 12th, 2025.

NOTICE OF IMPENDING POWER TO SELL
TAX-DEFAULTED PROPERTY

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3361, 3362

Pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code 3691 and 3692.4, the following conditions will, by operation of law, subject real property to the Tax Collector's power to sell.

1) All property for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for five or more years.

Note: The power to sell schedule for nonresidential commercial property is three or more years of tax-defaulted status, unless the county adopts, by ordinance or resolution, the five-year tax default schedule.

2) All property that has a nuisance abatement lien recorded against it and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

3) Any property that has been identified and requested for purchase by a city, county, city and county or nonprofit organization to serve the public benefit by providing housing or services directly related to low-income persons and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

The parcels listed herein meet one or more of the criteria listed above and thus, will become subject to the Tax Collector's power to sell on July 1, 2025, at 12:01 a.m., by operation of law. The Tax Collector's power to sell will arise unless the property is either redeemed or made subject to an installment plan of redemption initiated as provided by law prior to close of business on the last business day in June. The right to an installment plan terminates on the last business day in June, and after that date the entire balance due must be paid in full to prevent sale of the property at public auction.

The right of redemption survives the property becoming subject to the power to sell, but it terminates at close of business on the last business day prior to the date of the sale by the Tax Collector.

All information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption will be furnished, upon request, by Amy Christensen, Humboldt County Tax Collector, 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, CA 95501, (707)476-2450.

The amount to redeem, including all penalties and fees, as of June 2025, is shown opposite the assessment/parcel number and next to the name of the assessee.

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's Parcel/Assessment Number (APN/ASMT), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the Assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map, if applicable, and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The Assessor's maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the Assessor's office.

ADMINISTER ESTATE OF

James Edward Jackson, III aka James E. Jackson, III, aka James Jackson
CASE NO. PR2400008
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of James Edward Jackson, III aka James E. Jackson, III, aka James Jackson
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner, Melody Jackson In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. The petition for probate requests that Melody Jackson be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A HEARING on the petition will be held on June 26, 2025 at 9:30 a.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 4
For information on how to appear remotely for your hearing, please visit <https://www.humboldt.courts.ca.gov/>
IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
